Contestants run 'The Amazing Race' at 8 p.m. Wednesday on CBS.

'The Amazing Race' begins

By John Crook

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

CBS sends 11 pairs of teammates sprinting and spitting around the world in pursuit of $1 million in "The Amazing Race," a new reality program from Hollywood mogul Jerry Bruckheimer ("CSI: Crime Scene Investigation") and former "Cops" producer Bertram van Munster.

Professional adventurer Phil Keoghan ("Keoghan's Heroes") hosts the 13-week series, which premieres Wednesday, Sept. 5.

The competition spans the globe, as its 22 players match wits and temperament to complete their 30- to 40-day journey through a variety of countries and cultures. The contestants range in age from 21 to 64, an ethnic cross section that pairs roommates, best friends, engaged couples, life partners and longtime grandparents.

And any one of these teams is capable of winning this competition, Keoghan insists.

"The contestants always were pushed more emotionally than they were physically," he explains. "This race was not mainly about the physical, and everything was accessible. There was nothing there that was a life-threatening stunt or put anyone in danger, and it was designed so that any of the teams could win."

"It was about how the players dealt with the pressure of racing, the pressure of competing against other teams, the stresses of dealing with changing time zones and cultures. And that was really their toughest challenge, I would say: dealing with a cultural difference that was so out of the ordinary for them that it really threw some of them into a spin, simply because it was something they were not used to."

'Band of Brothers' debuts

By Stephen English

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

War is hell. So is making a miniseries about it, according to some of the players in HBO's ballyhooed "Band of Brothers," premiering Sunday, Sept. 9.

"It wasn't about acting. It was more about being a soldier — getting the job done. It wasn't about, 'OK, here's the camera, smile. Make sure my hair looks good.' It was about, 'Here's the group of guys you're commanding. You better make sure none of them die,'" says Rene L. Moreno, who was among the last to join the huge "Band of Brothers" cast, which also includes Donnie Wahlberg, David Schwimmer, Scott Grimes, Frank John Hughes, Neal McDonough, Adam James, Kirk Acevedo, Eion Bailey, Philip Barrantini and Ross McCall.

British actor Damian Lewis, the star of the miniseries, agrees with Moreno wholeheartedly. "Band of Brothers" was, physically, incredibly demanding because of the literal soldiering we had to do, day in and day out. As well as having the added pressure of having to re-create faithfully the people you're playing, knowing that they're alive and they're going to see it."

Moreno describes the 10-part miniseries as "Saving Private Ryan" times 10, and the movie reference isn't without import. "Band of Brothers" is the second high-profile World War II project with Steven Spielberg and Tom Hanks high on the credits list, this time as co-executive producers. It's based on the book by Stephen E. Ambrose, who interviewed survivors of the 506th Regiment of the 101st Airborne division, a unit ironically dubbed Easy Company.

Some TV critics have been hostile to 'Emeril,' the Emeril Lagasse sitcom premiering 7 p.m. Tuesday on NBC.

Emeril may emerge as a hit

By John Crook
TV DATA FEATURES WRITER

A bizarre little tempest in a teapot swept through an otherwise placid summer press tour of the nation's TV critics last July in California.

The topic was "Emeril," an NBC sitcom vehicle for superstar chef Emeril Lagasse that premieres Tuesday, Sept. 18. The show, from "Designing Women" creator-producer Linda Bloodworth-Thomason, features Lagasse as a TV superchef much like himself and a supporting cast that includes proven players such as Robert Urich and Lisa Ann Walter.

It's neither the best nor the worst of the season's network newbies, yet some critics have reacted as if "Emeril" is a bigger threat to America than the West Nile virus. One gentleman even became so worked up that he asked

NBC West Coast president Scott Sassa to "explain how a show like "Emeril" gets as far as it has."

As press conferences go, these "Emeril" moments were unusually surreal and bore the distinct whiff of writers desperately trying to whip up some drama after long days of business-as-usual sessions. And within a day or two, the conventional wisdom on "Emeril" began to change as cooler heads prevailed. The show is now considered by some to be a potential sleeper hit, a show that flies under the radar of TV critics but clicks with viewers.

That's a common phenomenon in network television. As recently as last year, the assembled critics quietly dismissed the CBS sitcom "Yes, Dear" in a session that was, hilariously, the antithesis of the rancorous "Emeril" dispute.

Darwin's theory evolves

By Stephen English

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

A few people still think the Earth is flat. Hardly anybody believes the sun revolves around our planet anymore.

But people have a tougher time accepting the scientific proposition that all life — including humanity — is descended from one ancient, simple being that sprung forth from amino acids and a few other special ingredients.

"It's the same reason you can go into a bar and start a fight by saying something about somebody's mother," says Dr. Kenneth Miller, who appears in the first episode of the four-part miniseries "Evolution," airing

Monday through Thursday, Sept. 24-27, on PBS (check listings).

"We all care about where we're from, and, to a lot of people, the notion that we have a biological ancestry in the processes of this planet — in short, that we are a part of nature — to many people raised in the Western tradition, (this) is scary, is threatening," continues Miller, who is both an evolutionary biologist and a devout Catholic.

Threatening as the idea may seem to some, evidence is abundant that not only was Charles Darwin spot-on, but that his theory is uniting the biological sciences much in the same way Einstein helped unite physics and astronomy. For instance: Every planting season, farmers wrestle with insects that are no longer killed by pesticides invented just a few years ago.
